We were familiar with the previous climbing-gym projects from German Haimerl Architekten, so we decided to collaborate with them. And as expected, we were able to rely completely on their professional support.

Despite the difficult conditions in the existing building and the external limitations of the development plan, the architects were able to obtain a construction permit within a very short time that exactly matched what we wanted for our bouldering world. We were able to open on time, which was an essential requirement for the commercial success of our facility.

We would be happy to build with German Haimerl Architekten again anytime.
